8 DECENT WORK AND ECONOMIC GROWTH

Almost half of the world's population still lives on the equivalent of about two dollars a day. In many places, simply obtaining a job does not guarantee escaping the clutches of poverty. This slow and uneven progress necessitates rethinking the economic and social policies we adopt to eradicate poverty, with the aid of new tools in this field. The continued lack of decent work opportunities, insufficient investments, and low consumption lead to a weakening of the fundamental social contract on which democratic societies are based: the requirement for everyone to share in progress.

The Human Rights Division at Alnoor University organized a seminar titled "Child Labor and Its Impact on the Right to Education." The event was supervised by Assistant Lecturer Qaidar Ahmed Mahmoud from the Faculty of Law. Three faculty members from the Faculty of Law delivered lectures during the seminar. Assistant Lecturer Amjad Sharif Ali presented a lecture titled "Child Labor as a Fundamental Violation of Human Rights." Assistant Lecturer Asmaa Khalil Ibrahim discussed "Mechanisms for Addressing Children's Right to Education Issues." Assistant Lecturer Raed Khalaf Shankali delivered a lecture titled "The Right to Education for Children: Street Vendors as a Case Study."
