Sustainable Development Goals

Peace, Justice and Strong Institutions

16 PEACE, JUSTICE AND STRONG INSTITUTIONS

Encouraging the establishment of peaceful communities where no one is marginalized is essential for achieving sustainable development. This involves ensuring that everyone has access to justice, building effective and accountable institutions that are inclusive at all levels, and significantly reducing illicit flows of money and weapons. Additionally, it includes enhancing the recovery and return of stolen assets and combating all forms of organized crime..

College of Arts

The Department of Digital Media at the College of Arts, Alnoor University, organized a scientific seminar entitled "The Digital Space: A Tool of Resistance or a Promoter of Addiction," as part of the university's efforts to shed light on contemporary issues related to the growing use of digital technologies and their various impacts on individuals and society. The seminar was supervised by Lecturer Dr. Karam Muzaffar Jassim, a faculty member of the department, and featured contributions from several specialists. Assistant Lecturer Ali Osama Al-Rifa'i from the Sunni Endowment Directorate presented a paper addressing the religious perspective in confronting addiction, while Lecturer Dr. Raed Suleiman Mohammed from the Ministry of Health delivered a lecture on the harmful health effects of addiction. In addition, Colonel Hazem from the Community Police highlighted the security dimension of combating addiction and the role of security institutions in awareness and treatment. The seminar witnessed notable attendance from faculty members and students and included discussions and questions that enriched its themes, contributing to raising awareness of the importance of employing digital space in a positive manner and limiting its risks, particularly those related to addiction and its various repercussions.